Keeping Children Safe

Early intervention – greater access to services – support for families – ensuring there are no wrong doors to accessing help – working together; these are just some of the priorities needed to prevent youth suicide.

Of the 76,257 contacts to Kids Helpline counsellors in the first six months of this year, 19% or 6,928 of these counselling sessions were with children and young people with suicide-related issues.

The causes are complex. Kids Helpline acts as a 'safety net' for children and young people in a broader social support system and has a unique position of being the only 24/7 counselling service available to children and young people.

When you buy a ticket in this Art Union, you're helping to provide children and young people access to professional help they so desperately need to keep them safe.

Good luck in the draw!
